Hazardous chemicals found in most detergents not only endanger our environment by contaminating ground water, lakes and oceans – in many cases decimating species dependent on water, for example, fish, frogs and plants, but in addition, studies have shown that in most homes chemical toxicity levels exceed the permitted standards, and in many cases these toxic concentrations are up to 70 times higher than in our external environment. When ingested, absorbed through the skin or inhaled, these chemicals can cause a myriad of residual illnesses that often appear much later on. Allergies, headaches, depression, dizziness, Alzheimer's, cancers, chronic fatigue and many more ailments have all been linked to the chemicals in our household detergents. Add to that the impact from industrial cleaning agents, and our toxic exposure problem takes on a whole new dimension.

Recent (1994 - 2004) extensive research in Europe and America shows increases of over 500% in this 10-year period alone of eczema and many other skin disorders, as well as asthma and many other respiratory conditions, which are the direct result of chemicals and vapours resulting from cleaning products.

Our products are designed to safely and effectively replace those toxic chemicals. The move toward a greener approach to lifestyles has prompted Triple Orange to research and subsequently develop two products that will ensure uncluttered pantries, make cleaning easier and protect the environment. Orange oil is known for its strong degreasing properties and, since oranges grow on trees, they are a renewable resource.

Triple Orange General Purpose Cleaning Gel

Made from the peel of the orange, it is a concentrated water-soluble pH-balanced orange oil-based gel. A super-powerful cleaner and degreaser, safe for use on all surfaces, including heat-producing equipment. This gel is gentle on your hands, contains no sulfates or phosphates and works on all surfaces. This new cutting-edge pure orange oil-base cleaning gel replaces absolutely all your household cleaning products. D'limonene is the active ingredient that gives citrus cleaners their punch. Through a double-distillation process, d'limonene is separated from the orange oil, removing the acidity, leaving Triple Orange General Purpose Gel with a neutral pH. This double-distillation process preserves the organic integrity of Triple Orange General Purpose Gel, which is not corrosive, and leaves no residue. Two environmentally friendly (EPA-approved) surfactants are added to allow d'limonene to blend with water. Surfactants are also wetting agents, which gives Triple Orange General Purpose Gel extra cleaning strength.

Triple Orange Laundry Detergent

A powerful laundry detergent and degreaser which requires no softener, is pH-balanced and made from orange oil. It is 100% bio-degradable, gentle on your fabrics and acts as a softener as well.
